

PSYCHOLOGY 199 - FACULTY SPONSOR STATEMENT

Please submit this supplemental form along with your official Learning Contract (created on My.UCLA).

Student's Name

Student ID #

Psychology 199 is an Independent Research course created to offer self-initiating students the opportunity to conduct individual and independent research under the direction of a faculty member in the Psychology Department. The purpose of a 199 course is to provide students with the opportunity to design and carry out their own program of study and research. Throughout the quarter, the faculty member should work closely with the student and guide the student through the various phases of the student's research. At the end of the quarter, the student must submit a final version of their research paper to the faculty sponsor.

Psych 199 is not intended to be a Research Assistantship position. If your student is interested in working as a Research Assistant (aiding you or your graduate students in their research), please direct them to enroll in Psych 196A (Research Assistantship in Psychology) instead.

Faculty Sponsor's Signature

Date

- The Psych 199 faculty sponsor must be a regular faculty member in the Psychology Department.
- The student must have Psychology, Psychobiology, or Cognitive Science major standing.
- The Psych 199 project must be individual research. This is not intended to be a research assistantship.
- Students from other departments may enroll only with departmental consent based on their prior research experience and coursework.

Please submit this supplemental form along with your Psych 199 Learning Contract to the Psychology Advising Office, 1531 Franz Hall.